26th Annual School Symposium

When: March 8th and 9th 2019

Where: James Madison University, Harrisonburg, VA
235 Martin Luther King Jr Way, Harrisonburg, VA 22807

Keynote Address: Cynthia Dodds, PT, PhD, PCS

Dr. Dodds is Associate Professor at the Medical University of South Carolina. She brings a wealth of knowledge in the examination of quality of life in the care of children and youth with complex acute, chronic, acquired, or congenital disabilities. Using the International Classification of Functioning, Disability and Health framework and quality of life and humanism conceptual models, Dr. Dodds will define and differentiate children with complex disabilities, briefly review pediatric assessments and outcome measures, and describe, develop, and share knowledge concerning treatment interventions.

Plenary Address: Patty Laverdure, OTD, OTR/L, BCP & Pam Stephenson, OTD, OTR/L

Dr. Laverdure is Assistant Professor at Virginia Commonwealth University and Dr. Stephenson is Associate Professor at Murphey Deming College of the Health Science. During the session, the speakers will consider current practice and identify strategies for developing and enhancing contextual, occupation/activity-focused services across the pediatric continuum. Practitioners will examine the evidence supporting occupation-based interventions and outcomes, and explore the characteristics of environments and interventions that enhance meaningful participation.
